INTRODUCTION

History of the Department

York University's Faculty of Fine Arts was instituted in 1967. Under the deanship of Jules Heller, programmes were initially offered in visual arts, film, music and theatre arts. The Faculty's goal was to offer a flexible curriculum integrating research and practice and emphasizing interdisciplinary education. Students could pursue either a Specialized or Combined Honours B.A., concentrating on studio experience or history of art.

Administration of the various programmes was conducted by individual Departments, which had responsibility for the formulation of plans, the recording of decisions, the preparation of budgets and the co-ordination of activities in support of the trifold functions of the university--teaching, research and service.

A two-year M.F.A. graduate programme in the areas of Visual Arts was inaugurated in September 1974. It consisted of an intensive five terms in the studio areas of Design, Drawing, Painting, Photography, Printmaking, Sculpture and Mass Media. Heads of the individual graduate areas were known as Directors, ie. Director of the Graduate Programme in Visual Arts. The programme's goal was the development of trained artists and leaders for art institutions in Canada. Graduate students undertook independent studio work supervised by designated faculty members. The M.F.A. Programme reported to the Council of the Faculty of Graduate Studies through the Director of the M.F.A. Programme and the Faculty of Fine Arts Graduate Programme Executive Committee. The graduate programme shared space, facilities and faculty with the undergraduate programme, and received its funding from it.

After considerable delay, the M.A. programme in Art History was established in September 1981.

Leadership is clearly an important aspect of the historical context of the Visual Arts Department. In contrast to other Fine Arts Departments, it is not officially defined in the early calendars, but may have been provided directly by Dean Heller, who was a Professor in Visual Arts. The Preliminary Calendar (Spring 1972) first formally identifies a Director of the programme, Luke Rombout.

Subsequent Directors of the Department (described as Chairmen by 1973/74) are noted in Appendix I. Interestingly, names and dates provided in the calendars do not always coincide with names and position titles found in typed correspondence for the same time period. The Department was in a state of flux, which the formal calendar records (produced once a year) do not reflect. Due to conflicting evidence, names and position titles found in the correspondence are shown in asterisks in Appendix I.

Committees played a significant role in the formation of policies and procedures. The mandate and composition of the various committees is described in File No. 588. Minutes document the workings of the committees.

General description of the Department's records

The records of the Faculty of Fine Arts Visual Arts Department (Accession 88-008) consist of minutes, correspondence, reports, charts, memoranda, calendars, timetables, curriculum vitae, posters, brochures, exhibition catalogues, and clippings. These are in the form of originals, onionskin copies, stencils and photocopies. In addition, there are slides and one tape recording. The files represent the time period 1968 to 1987, with major coverage from 1975 to 1983. They are housed in 41 archival boxes, occupying 41 cubic feet of space.

Such records serve as the administrative memory of the Department, illustrating policies and procedures useful in determining precedents, defining alternatives, preparing budgets, establishing dates and facts, providing legal evidence, and writing a Departmental history. In addition, they have potential as sources for historical, political, sociological and artistic research on the intellectual and cultural milieu.

Organization and arrangement of the records

The accession, transferred in the summer of 1988, consisted of 75 transfer drawers and boxes (200 feet) of records of the Visual Arts Department. Most of the files arrived in large, black Stax on Steel cardboard boxes. A few had identifying labels and markings, but there was no container list. The boxes were roughly listed by Archives and Special Collections, to determine their general structure in terms of series and time coverage. The records seemed to fall into logical groupings such as the files of the Chairman; Assistant to the Chairman; administrative files; faculty files; course files, and files dealing with the graduate programme. However, the boxes themselves sometimes contained more than one grouping. Some records were not labelled or enclosed in files. Many file dates were missing.

Organization of the contents of most of the boxes seemed to be based on a simple alphabetical scheme, either by title or by surname. The alphabetical structure was discernible but not entirely intact. There was considerable lack of standardization in the wording of file titles on a common theme. Boxes with course files were arranged chronologically, then by course number.

The following series were established: Administrative; Chairman's Office; Courses and Curriculum; Faculty; Financial; Graduate Programme; Personnel, and Printed Material. Their general validity as series was confirmed by the later discovery of two filing legends, for the Administrative and Graduate Programme files. Records of the Chairman and Assistant to the Chairman were combined as the Chairman's Office. The files of the Chairman were left intact, other than to move Tenure and Promotion files into the Faculty series, as the filing legend suggested. The correspondence of all previous Chairmen was moved into the Chairman's Office series, to provide ready access to significant material.

Some of the Administrative files were distributed to other series as logic dictated. An artificial series of complete files of Printed Material was created for ease of access to that format.

Routine processing was performed. Large files were divided. Empty files were discarded. Exact duplicates of material in files were removed; annotated copies were retained. The Administrative and Courses and Curriculum series required reasonably aggressive weeding due to the presence of multiple photocopies, whereas the other series were weeded more conservatively.

The lack of standardized titles resulted in a dispersion of common files throughout the alphabet, ie. Dept. Retreat 81-82; Graduate Retreat--Bewdley 1984/85; Gitche Gumee 1983/84. The volume of files and time constraints on reference staff seemed to justify a system offering greater collocation of material resulting in faster access. The new system draws on the natural wording (if not the actual order) of the title, or employs wording in the filing legends.

Subject cross-reference cards have been made to explain the interrelationships among files and between series. In addition, a list of significant or anomalous material in files has been created, to guide the researcher (page 175).

Student files are with the Department. Financial printout statements, routine reports produced periodically, petty cash vouchers, receipt and cash books, and accounts office printouts have not been retained.
